

Rowing Opens Doors For College Scholarships

Title IX has made hundreds of college rowing scholarships available for women rowers, and recently some colleges have even begun to offer scholarships to a select few of their men's rowers.

ERA Rowers Go To:

Stanford, MIT, UPenn, Duke, Naval Academy, Michigan, Syracuse, Cornell, Univ of Tenn, Univ of Tulsa, Boston Univ, Gonzaga, Univ of Washington, Washington State Univ, Oregon State Univ, Western Washington

Everett Rowers Hitting Scholarship Gold

Everett Rowing currently has 26 former athletes receiving over $550,000 a year in collegiate athletic scholarship awards.

This is a nice showing by a club which is decidedly not a "prep" or "ivy league" team. In the U.S. Pacific Northwest, rowing is mostly a club sport, and not part of any particular school (there are a few exceptions to that rule). The Everett club draws rowers from a wide variety of high schools and backgrounds, and their parent's occupations have traditionally ranged from business owners and Boeing engineers to mechanics, welders, truck drivers, and other blue-collar trades. It makes a nice mix, the parents are very active and work together well, and the results speak for themselves.

WWW.EVERETTROWING.COM